SUSSEX COUNTY, ITS ADVANTAGES

repetition; the Bain Peanut Company, who are the largest handlers of peanuts in the world, have their headquarters and principal factory in this county in the heart of that vigorous and in every way up-to-date little town of Wakefield, eight miles or more east of here. Wakefield is a great little town and worthy of its advantageous location in the great county of Sussex.

Waverly's Peanut Factory.

Waverly is also a peanut market that commands attention. The commission merchants here buy vast quantities of the nuts and their sales are something immense in the course of a season. The heaviest handlers of the peanuts here are the Waverly Peanut Company, who maintain a large warehouse and cleaning establishment, dealing in a wholesale way in the shelled and unshelled nuts and cleaning them and preparing them for the markets of the country.

This company, of which Mr. Purnell Fleetwood is the general manager, makes a specialty of the Virginia shelled and the Spanish shelled nuts. The company ships nuts to all parts of the country and their trade, which is immense, brings a great deal of outside money to Waverly to be distributed among the peanut raisers of Sussex county.

From the information I have been able to gather, I can but reach the conclusion that if a man is in search of a region that offers facilities for stock raising that cannot be excelled by Kentucky, Sussex county is the location he is hunting for. The native grasses afford excellent pasturage for cow, sheep, horses, mules, hogs and goats for seven months of the year, for which time this stock will fatten without additional food and keep in fine condition, and for the other five months of the year with little food and what the natural pasture affords, this stock will keep in a growing condition.

Much Game and Fish.

Judge West, who is not only an ornamental hunter and bench and game sportsman and an enthusiastic fisherman as well, tells me that there is no section of the State or of the South that offers more enticements to the fisherman and the hunter than the section from which I am writing. Game, such as deer, wild turkey, partridge, hare, squirrel, beaver, opossum, raccoon and duck, abound in this section. This section offers all that heart could wish. An opportunity to secure game preserves is now open here, and an investor for this purpose would be sure to get his money back, with 10 per cent. per annum on the outlay, from the growth of timber thereon in the course of twenty years, besides the use of the lands.

Sussex county has all kinds of railway transportation facilities and all kinds of competition for freights. I do not hear any complaint in these parts about freight rates. Some wise philosopher has said: "The best thing with which to tame a railroad is another railroad." Sussex county has enough railway lines to guarantee tameness to a degree.

The Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and Norfolk and Western Railroad pass directly through the county from north to south, the Atlantic Coast Line furnishing transportation for the people in the western section of the county and the Norfolk and Western furnishing transportation for the people in the eastern end of the county, while the Southern Railway passes through the central part of the county, entering on the southwest and running in a northeasterly direction until it enters the county of Surry, furnishing transportation for the people in the central part of the county. The Virginia Railway passes from east to west through the southern part of the county, and will furnish transportation for the people in the southern portion of the county, and the Surry, Sussex and Southampton Railway passes through the central, southern and eastern portions.

Towns and Villages.

With its productive soil, its many marketable products, and its railway facilities, it is not strange that Sussex county has a number of splendid little towns. It would be very remarkable if it did not have them. The largest of these vigorous marketing towns is the one from which I am writing.

Waverly, with a population of about 1,200, is situated at the junction of the Norfolk and Western and Southern Railroads, and is about fifteen miles from the James River, on the Southern. It is a modern, progressive and thoroughly up-to-date town. Its streets are graded; sidewalks made of concrete, as good as any city in the State; it is lighted by electricity; has fine, large stores made of brick; a peanut factory, canning factory, extensive lumber manufacturing plant, three large sawmills, factories recently brought here through public subscription in the Industrial Section of the Times-Dispatch; a large grist mill and several smaller industries. It has four churches, a fine public school, a weekly newspaper, local and long distance telephone exchange and connects with boats and a very prosperous bank, with $113,105.42 deposits and total footings amounting to $279,984.42.

Wakefield is situated eight miles east of Waverly, on the Norfolk and Western Railroad, and is a thriving and progressive town of over 1,000 inhabitants.

lantic Coast Line Railway, and of which I speak later, is also a beautiful market that is of considerable importance. Jarratt has not at present a cleaning factory, but it has a large number of merchants who handle the nuts in an extensive way. Jarratt, with two railways competing for its freight, has rare facilities for handling the nuts that blue and brown Panama territory, and the farmers thereabouts get satisfactory prices for their products. Jarratt will be long here to have a cleaning factory.

Wealth in Its Farms.

Sussex has always been a famous agricultural county. There are plantations in the county which have been cleared and cultivated continuously for more than 100 years that will yet produce handsomely. These lands respond readily to all sorts of fertilizers. The crops mentioned are easy to cultivate and handle, and yield abundantly when properly cultivated. The peanut crop is a money-maker, is very easy to cultivate, which can be done principally by machinery. They are planted with a peanut planter, dug with a peanut digger and threshed with a peanut threshing machine. The rate of 400 to 500 bushels per day.

The lazy negro does not cut much of the peanut in the county, but the peanut is pre-eminently the white man's crop, his money-maker.

Fruit-raising is for many days a very profitable part of agriculture. The time was when Virginia farmers considered fruit-raising as a mere plaything, and they had peach trees and apple trees and strawberry beds just for fun, and to furnish a wide luxury for the old folks at home. In later years Virginians have learned that there is profit in peach trees and strawberry beds, and in no part of Virginia has this fact been more manifest than in Sussex county. It is natural that such should be the case, for in no part of Virginia is the climate better suited to the lands more adapted to fruit culture than right here in Sussex county.

The same conditions that make fruit-growing profitable conduce to market gardening, which, because of the adaptability of the soil, is added to this is the splendid location for market. To every part of the county large city markets are accessible—Norfolk, Portsmouth and Suffolk on one side, Petersburg and Richmond on another, and New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia in easy access by water transportation from Norfolk, all combine to make Sussex county a trucking county that has but few, if any, equals.

Talking with Judge West about the timber lands of the county, he became enthusiastic. Said he:

"The finest timber in the world grows here, such as yellow pine, white oak, ash, hickory, gum, cypress, maple, poplar, dogwood, cedar, birch, red oak and post oak. While vast quantities of timber have been cut and manufactured into lumber in this county, yet there still remains standing large quantities of very fine timber to be cut and manufactured. Experience has demonstrated that the yellow pine, which sells itself when land is left uncultivated, will come up and grow into sawmill timber in from twenty-five to thirty years and pay over 10 per cent. per annum on an investment in the lands of this county, at the present price, and at the present price of standing timber. An investment in these lands cannot be surpassed."

Stock Raising.

From the information I have been able to gather, I can but reach the conclusion that if a man is in search of a region that offers facilities for stock raising that cannot be excelled by Kentucky, Sussex county is the location he is hunting for. The native grasses afford excellent pasturage for cow, sheep, horses, mules, hogs and goats for seven months of the year, for which time this stock will fatten without additional food and keep in fine condition, and for the other five months of the year with little food and what the natural pasture affords, this stock will keep in a growing condition.

tants, with well graded streets, large stores, a prosperous bank, with $275,081.10 deposits and total footings amounting to $333,930.14; the Immense Bain peanut factory, a furniture factory, and several smaller industries, and four churches; and an excellent public school building costing $10,000. It also has telephone connections, hotels, etc.

Jarratt is thirty miles from Petersburg, at the junction of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway and the Virginia Railway. It has large stores, two churches, a thriving bank, with $33,165.27 deposits and total footings amounting to $72,628.09, telephone connections, and it bids fair to be a town of considerable proportions in the near future.

Other Places of Importance.

Stony Creek, located on the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, about twenty miles from Petersburg, is a growing and progressive village; has a thriving bank, established about a year ago, with $49,920 deposits and total footings amounting to $62,286.08, and two large cotton gins, peanut warehouses, and a large lumber manufacturing plant.

Other towns and villages in the county are Sussex Courthouse, the county seat; Homeville, Yale, Masons, Grizzard and Gray. All of these villages, except the county seat, are located on the Southern Railway. The largest of them is Gray, located at the junction of the new Virginia Railway with the Southern. It promises to be a town of considerable importance, and some of its ambitious and wide-awake citizens say that Waverly and Wakefield will have to look to their laurels or else Gray may become the metropolis of Sussex county some of these days.

Oakdale Colony.

There are any number of small farms to be had in Sussex county for a mere song, so to speak.

The Waverly Farm Agency, which is a member of the Norfolk and Western Immigration Association, has done much to bring new settlers to the county, and expects to do a great deal more. This agency has purchased a large tract of land near Waverly and cut it up into little twenty-five acre lots, upon which they erect a cottage home and sell to immigrants for $500 on accommodating terms. They have already located about twenty families on this beautiful Oakdale Colony tract and others are coming. Those who have already come have been very successful and are prospering.

Enthusiastic Land Agent.

The Hawley-Moore Land Company, with headquarters here, has control of more Sussex and Surry county farms and lands than any other agency, and Mr. E. J. Moore, who is a hustler, is kept busy showing lands to Westerners from the rigid winters of the blizzard country for more comfortable homes in the salubrious climate of Old Virginia. I asked Mr. Moore about the prices of these Sussex and Surry county lands, and at once he grew eloquent, evidently thinking I was an immigrant from the cold Northwest. Said he: "You can buy land in Sussex now at from $10 to $20 per acre that will produce more per acre than lands which cost from $100 to $300 per acre in the North and West. The large farms will be divided up into smaller ones, and now is your chance."

"Sussex land is a great welcome you here and make you feel at home; protect you in the enjoyment of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. You need only to be honest, industrious and law-abiding, and success will attend you."

I will not reveal my identity.
